Cumberland.

Among the exports from Portland last week were 1,410,084 feet of lumber, 17,140 packages of pickets, 116,000 feet of deals, 10 cases sewing machines, 2,000 empty bags, 0 cases of leather, besides the Boston City's cargo, and besides the molasses already reported, the imports included 3,000 railway ties, 6,590 live lobsters, 3,250 bushels of potatoes, and 350 pounds of old lead.

James H. Dennison, a colored man, was arrested in Portland Sunday night, by officers Norton and Hughes, for breaking into the house of Mrs. Bragdon on Montreal street. Mrs. Bragdon's dog set up such a barking that the fellow skipped out of the house without securing any plunder. Mrs. Bragdon can identify the man arrested as the would-be burglar.

Dana Foster, son of Mayor Foster, of Waterville, was taken sick Saturday with a disease pronounced varioloid. There is also a case of sickness at the college which it is feared may be small pox, though it is impossible to determine yet. There is much excitement in the city. It is not known where the disease was caught but young Foster is a student and has been away to the ball games, and it is thought possible that this may afford a clue to the source of the contagion.

Mrs. J. H. Riddell, the well-known novelist, is a native of Ireland. Her father was high sheriff of County Antrim, and at his death the young girl went to London to fight the battle of life on her own account. She won after a hard struggle, and now lives in a delightful cottage in Upper Halliford, not far from the Thames, where she cultivates a garden with her own hands and raises quantities of choice fowls. This quiet, independent life, she says, is the fruition of all she has ever hoped for.

It is estimated from comparative statistics that during the next five years over 600,000 young women and girls without any particular occupation will land at Castle Garden, and that one in every ten of these is lost in the great maelstrom of New York City. The Methodists are to hold a meeting Friday evening to talk over the subject and consider how to rescue these young women. The establishment of a protectory and industrial school is suggested as a feasible means of putting them in the way of earning an honest livelihood.

George Bidwell, the American forger who recently reached this country after serving fourteen years in British prisons for his connection with the famous $5,000,000 forgery on the bank of England, has written an autobiography which will soon be published. The literary aspirations of great criminals are characteristic of the times. If a man attains the notoriety which pertains to an act of gigantic scoundrelism, he seizes his pen and asks the public to read an account of his rascally adventures. But because a man has been a law-breaker there is no reason why he should cap his villainy by writing a book.

Miss Agnes Murray, of Bridgeport, Conn., is a most eccentric woman. She is possessed of a large fortune, and she spends her income in an extremely curious way. For instance, a year ago she bought a house in Bridgeport for $35,000 and immediately closed it, allowing no one to live in it, though many desirable tenants presented themselves. She is fond of telling what a belle she was in her youth, and how she danced with the British Minister at a State ball in Washington. She is in the habit of inviting her friends to visit her country place and permitting them to walk four miles from the station, although she has a stable full of horses and carriages.

Andrew Carnegie and his wife, with his partner, Henry Phipps, Jr., his wife and son, sailed for Southampton on the Ems Tuesday. At London they will meet Mr. Blaine and others, and will start June 1 on their coaching trip. The party will number ten or twelve. In the four-in-hand they will proceed leisurely to Scotland, keeping along the east side of England. The trip, as planned, is much the same as that taken by Mr. Carnegie, and the well-known novelist, William Black, some years ago. The route is nearly seven hundred miles in length, and their tally-ho will be rolling for five weeks or more before it comes to a standstill at Cluny Castle, Mr. Carnegie's summer residence. Here they will rest from the long ride through picturesque stretches of country and through the cities of historical importance, Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie will spend the remainder of the summer at Cluny Castle.

Like a Bicycle.

SHALL MOODY BOYNTON'S SYSTEM REVOLUTIONIZE THE RAILWAY TRAVEL OF THE WORLD? A SPEED OF 100 MILES AN HOUR OR MORE.

Without drawing a spike, or interfering with the present railway trains until economy and speed supersedes them, E. Moody Boynton has patents which he believes are destined to revolutionize the present railway system of the world.

He got his idea from the bicycle, and acting on the theory that the bicycle goes easier and faster proportionately than any other vehicle of locomotion, he began experimenting, and now, after ten years of thought and labor, he has developed and perfected what he calls the "Boynton bicycle railway system."

It is simply a bicycle train run in a groove.

The contract is already given for an experimental road to be built from Hampden, N. H., to Salisbury Beach cottages, three miles in length, and the locomotive which will draw the train is being built at the works of Albert Russell in Newburyport. The whole thing, cars, track, locomotive and all, will be ready for operating by the middle of July.

The inventor is a man who is known all over the world. For fifteen years at intervals he devoted much money, time and eloquence to the reformation of the prevalent ideas as to money, regulation of railroads, immigration and the reservation of lands for actual settlers. He achieved a national reputation as a speaker and writer, inventing a lightning saw that staggered the Emperor of Brazil and got patents for his invention all over the world. He went over to England and grasped the hand of Queen Victoria, dabbled with politics at home, and, as he says himself, got disgusted, advocated woman suffrage; defended the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution in Congress, and now he comes forward with an invention which he confidently expects will leave himself and his heirs and assigns in the possession of a fortune.

In 1887, the first patent on his bicycle railway was issued, and to day he has secured protection on his invention in the United States, Europe, Asia, Africa, South America and Australia. The most experienced railway and civil engineers have given it as their opinion that his system means as and advance in rapid and economic railway transportation as the present railway system is over the old stage coach or baggage wagons, or as the large bicycle is over the boy's velocipede.

A company with $5,000,000 authorized capital has already been organized, which looks as if there were moneyed men who believe the system to be feasible. Everybody knows that transportation involves, next to real estate, the largest investment of civilized nations—over $10,000,000,000 in America, and double the sum in other lands—and is but a small fraction of the sums that in the near future will be required for all the world.

Boynton's system does not disturb or destroy existing roads; it saves more than half their expense, while trebling speed. To reduce the cost of transportation is a measureless benefit worthy of the greatest invention of the age, which, in the language of the eminent chief examiner of engineering and railway patents, "is simple, inexpensive and practical."

Over the "Bicycle" road, San Francisco is brought within forty-eight hours of New York. A man can go from Boston to New York as quickly as he now goes to Worcester. He can travel one hundred miles an hour or more, and he will travel in a car where there is no such thing as standing room nuisances. If one is traveling a long distance, and rides in a palace car, he can go up stairs to the smoking-room instead of smoking on the same floor with the ladies, and he can go so fast that he can't see the posts or trees flit by him as he passes. He won't need to take a sleeper unless he be bound for South America.

Mr. Boynton says that the advantages of a "Bicycle" road over the ordinary system are, among others, cheapness of construction; a great saving of expense in grading and land damages; a greater proportion of paying to non-paying load by use of narrow, deep carriages; a great reduction in first cost and wear of rolling stock; a great saving of friction in rounding curves by substitution of bicycle spindles for ordinary wheel axles and consequent economy of power, in moving trains, and a rate of speed threefold greater than heretofore attained on railways, with comfort to passengers and economy in the conveyance of freight.

What is claimed for the system is:

First—A railway line constructed with a single supporting or bed rail, and an overhead guide rail, supported by a suitable structure for retaining the rolling stock on the bed rail.

Second—A railway structure open on one side and adapted to support and guide rolling stock.

Third—A railway structure adapted to support and guide rolling stock, formed of bent rails or beams to encircle the train.

Fourth—A railway structure adapted for a quadruple single rail line, two of which are surface tracks, substantially as set forth.

Fifth—A railway structure adapted to support and guide "bicycle" rolling stock; the overhead guide rail being so placed at the curve as to tilt the train towards the radius of the same for that purpose.

Sixth—A railway switch constructed and operating to shift the bed rail and guide rail simultaneously.

Seventh—In "bicycle" locomotives and "bicycle" carriages, the combination of two or more supporting wheels and two or more overhead guide wheels.

Eighth—In "bicycle" locomotives and railway carriages, an overhead guide wheel in combination with, and two safety wheels.

Ninth—A "bicycle" locomotive provided with a single driving wheel and one or more supporting wheels and two or more overhead guide wheels.

Tenth—In a "bicycle" locomotive in combination with a bed frame, an upper framing to support the overhead guide wheels.

Eleventh—In a "bicycle" locomotive, a coal supply box provided with incline chutes arranged on opposite sides of the driving wheel.

Twelfth—A "bicycle" railway carriage provided with lower compartments for passengers and luggage.

Thirteenth—A "bicycle" carriage or car provided with a door at the top to receive and a door at or near the bottom to discharge freight.

Fourteenth—A "bicycle" carriage or car provided with a skeleton metal frame for the conveyance of lumber and other coarse freight.

The working plans cover about 18 sheets and are pronounced by the manufacturing firm to be the finest they have ever seen. They are made by Coutles Carr of Boston, the leading mechanical engineer of New England. The engine is 17 feet over all, that's from the end of the cow catcher to the rear of the tender. The engine, cab and tender are

ALL IN ONE SOLID PIECE.

In the widest part the engine is only 44 inches wide. It has one driving wheel which is eight feet in diameter. From the centre of this wheel to the centre of the rear truck is twenty feet and four inches. All the wheels are to be made of cast steel with heavy steel tires shrunk on. The tire will have two deep flanges so as to keep the machine from leaving the track. The cylinders will be 14x12 inches. Under the tender will be a two wheel truck, while all the overhead trucks will have two wheels. Riveted to and around the boiler will be a strong frame which will carry the forward overhead truck of the engine. In it will be the bell, and the whole will not be so wide that it will at all obstruct the view of the engineer. Sixteen feet will measure the distance between the rails. Already the contract for the boiler has been given. It calls for a boiler 11 feet long, 42 inches in diameter, and with 93 tubes. Beneath the centre of this the one driver will be put. But the distance from the lower rail to the bottom of the boiler not being eight feet, the diameter of the driving wheel, there will be a depression in the centre of the length of the boiler deep enough to allow the erection of the wheel. The upper trucks have small guard trucks on each side which rest securely in powerful springs so that in case the train attempts to lean from the perpendicular it will be easily and firmly checked.

Another remarkable feature of the engine will be its capacity to turn. It is claimed it can turn around a curve of its own length. There is no possible chance for the train to leave the track, so perfect safety in all its movements is guaranteed. The unusual rate of speed of 100 or more miles an hour is promised.

The crank of the engine is unlike that of any other. It is a regular bicycle crank, the connecting rod being fastened to the crank, in just the place where the pedal of the road machine is attached. This will give an enormous leverage and power.

The patterns for the castings are nearly completed, three men having been kept busy at them for some time. Quite a number of the castings are done, and there will also be a great deal of forging done.

THE CARS WILL BE OF STEEL, light and strong, and will have a seating capacity of 100 persons, and the seats will be lengthwise.

Mr Boynton expects to erect his overhead track over the present railroads, and use both rails of each track as we now find them, for the reason being that two of his trains can pass, they are so narrow. With his cars 44 inches wide it gives 22 inches each side of the rail. The gauge of the broad-gauge road is four feet and eight and one half inches, or four feet eleven inches from centre of rail, which gives 29½ inches from middle of rail to middle of track. Twenty-two inches taken from this leaves 7½ inches from edge of bicycle car to middle of track. Double this and we have 11½ inches between the passing trains. So, it is readily seen that the old roads will not be a dead loss after all.

The entire weight of engine, tender, coal, water and all will be twenty tons.

The double-flanged driving wheel impinges sufficiently upon the track to prevent slipping, and to give the traction usually required in riding grades of one in ten, but by adjusting the overhead locomotive guide wheels so that these wheels will press against the overhead rail, the traction may be increased to any desired extent and any possibility of the trains leaving the track be avoided.

In his plan, Mr. Boynton seems to have covered everything in the way of railroad construction, even to patent jetties at the mouth of rivers or harbors in the open sea. Its ease of construction, beginning at the shore, will render secure harbors possible on any shallow coast line of lake or ocean, so that the coasts of California, Russia or South America can be quickly provided with safe harbors to which our trains can deliver their freightage.

The Irie railroad six-foot gauge, narrowed to 4 feet 10½ inches gauge, from centre to centre, saves nearly one-half weight, strain and friction, or as 36 to 19. The bicycle vertical spindle wheel reduces this to one and saves all grinding and wedging in rounding curves. The overhead guiding rail is set inward on curves, tipping the train toward the curve and balancing all centrifugal force upon the lower rail like a bicycle.

About one ton of train weight is now required to convey passengers; and the average freight train, empty, weighs more than the paying freight carried by it, while the bicycle train carries more than five times its own weight without five-fold loss of wasteful friction; a saving of at least tenfold is thus effected on freight; twentyfold on passenger trains.

A threefold speed over the present system may readily be attained by substituting the bicycle trains.

The present standard, 4 feet 11 inches from centre to centre, can be utilized without change or interference, while building the overhead guiding structure for this new system; its supports, either piles or framed posts, of wood or metal, will be placed outside of the lines of the trains; the overhead guiding rails are supported by cross-ties above the reach of ordinary trains, and permit the passage of

TWO DEEP BICYCLE TRAINS,

40 inches wide, to run in opposite directions with one foot clear space between them, while the same track can be used for the ordinary trains jointly until the new economical system has displaced the old.

The largest single investment in the United States, except real estate, is in railways—exceeding $8,000,000,000, according to Poor's Railroad Manual of 1886. Injury to the value of this property is not expected or desired.

This great saving is effected, as shown, without drawing a railway spike or changing of road bed, and the substitution which causes a saving many fold, while rapid, will not be disastrous. A saving of half the present expense of railroad operation would treble the net income.

The Bicycle Railroad Company has been incorporated to purchase the patents and license their use by existing roads on payment of a reasonable fraction of their net gains from using these patents. It is not proposed to build new roads or incur any liability by this company. Like the Bell Telephone Company, it proposes to license others, to build or use on royalty payment.

Should an average speed of 120 miles an hour be attained, the continent would be crossed in a day instead of a week, as now. Sleeping and parlor cars would no longer be a necessity except on trains to South America.

a man for groaning when he has Rheumatism or Neuralgia. The pain is simply awful. No torture in the ancient times was more painful than these twin diseases. But—oughtn't a man to be blamed if, having Rheumatism or Neuralgia, he wont use Ath-lo-pho-ros, when it has cured thousands who have suffered in the same way? It has cured hundreds after physicians have pronounced them incurable.

"The skill of five physicians could not cure me of Rheumatism which had settled in the hips, neck and shoulders. So intense was the pain that sleep was almost impossible. The first dose of Athlophoros gave me relief, and the third enabled me to sleep for four and a half hours without waking. I continued its use and am now well." REV. S. H. THOMAS, New Albany, Ind.

A REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION

—WILL BE HELD IN—

TY HALL, PORTLAND,

Tuesday, June 12, 1888,

AT 11 O'CLOCK A. M.

For the purpose of nominating a candidate for Governor, to be supported at the September election, and transacting any other business that may properly come before it.

The basis of representation will be as follows: Each city, town and plantation will be entitled to one delegate, and for each seventy five votes cast for the Republican candidate for Governor in 1886, an additional delegate, and for a fraction of forty votes in excess of seventy five votes, a further additional delegate. Vacancies in the delegation of any city, town or plantation can only be filled by residents of the county in which the vacancy exists.

The State Committee will be in session in the reception room of the Hall at nine o'clock on the morning of the Convention, for the purpose of receiving the credentials of delegates.

All electors of Maine, without regard to past political differences, who believe in protecting the industries of this State and its agricultural producers; who believe in protecting the laborer and the wage earner in every right, who believe "in opposing a policy which inspires labor with hope and crowns it with dignity, which gives safety to capital and protects its increase, which secures political power to every citizen, comfort and culture to every home;" giving free popular education to the people, in favor of free suffrage and an honest counting of ballots, who approve the prohibition of the liquor traffic and the promotion of the cause of temperance, in an economical, and efficient administration of public affairs, faithfully administered civil service; and who favor all judicious measures for the encouragement of American ship-building, are cordially invited to unite with the Republicans in the selection of delegates to this Convention.

Per Order Republican State Committee
J. H. MANLEY, Chairman
LES H. WING, Secretary.
Augusta, April 20, 1888.

The Democratic Convention.

The nomination of Hon. William L. Putnam by the Democratic State Convention at Augusta yesterday shows that our Democratic brethern realized that this year they could not afford to enter the campaign under the leadership of any of the side lights in their party who aspired to the nomination as a means of gaining prestige with the Administration. These gentlemen were therefore dropped from the "list" and Mr. Putnam, after an all night session, was finally induced to enter the field as the special friend of President Cleveland. There was no attempt to conceal the purpose of the Democrats, which is, in case of the nomination of Mr. Blaine, to bend all their energies in a effort to reduce the Republican majority in this State in September in the hope of aiding the Presidential prospects of Mr. Cleveland in November. Mr Putnam is an able gentleman, but with the Democratic party he stands upon the free trade platform of the President, and moreover was one of the commissioners who is responsible for the fishery treaty which will doubtless be rejected by the United States Senate as a complete surrender of the rights of American fishermen, either of which recommendations however much they may delight the Democracy will hardly prove good campaign material in Maine where the free trade policy and the fishery treaty are alike unpopular. As the Lewiston Journal well says, "he is not good bait to give Maine fishermen. They won't even nibble at a British hook even when baited to suit the State Department." The platform indorses the Democratic attempt to pass the Mills bill in Congress, a measure that means free trade absolutely so far as many Maine industries are concerned, but at the same time declares that the party does not favor free trade. Our Democratic friends cannot throw dust in the eyes of the people of the State in this fashion. There was a lively tilt on the license plank which a portion of the members desired to put in the platform. A majority report in favor of such a plank was submitted and a minority report against it, the latter being adopted after a somewhat stormy debate. This action in view of the talk in the Democratic journals of late showed that when it came to the decisive test the Democrats lacked the courage to brave public sentiment on this question. The summary overthrow of Chairman Brown has caused a row among his followers who declare that they will resent it, while Mr. Bass' successful efforts to defeat the election of Mr. Conners as a member of the State Committee from Penobscot County has caused an ugly feeling in local Democratic circles. Mr. Putnam will be handsomely defeated in September next.

In a Bad Frame of Mind.

The Portland Press has worked itself up to that pitch where it cannot tolerate any expression of opinion whatever that does not coincide with its own. It has been firing at THE WHIG for some time past because we have favored Mr. Burleigh's candidacy instead of the gentleman supported by the Press, and now it goes at the Evening Express because that paper ably disposed of its tirade against the Republicans of Ward Three, in this city. Hon. Josiah Drummond has a letter indorsing the Express editorial and he too is a target for the shafts of the Press. The Cleaves men are getting alarmed at the hot headed and unwise course of the Press, as they realize that it is helping Mr. Burleigh whose candidacy is just booming, and the Express tries to counteract it as follows.

"The Express is in favor of the nomination of Mr. Cleaves. But there are so many good reasons to be urged in his behalf as to make it unnecessary—even if it would be helpful to him—to make silly attacks upon those who are in favor of some other candidate.

Minnesota Presidential Preferences.

Senator Cushman K. Davis, of Minnesota, is at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York, having come over from Washington for three or four days' rest. When asked about politics he said: "There is no question that Mr. Blaine would have been nominated but for his letter withdrawing his name. His sincerity in that matter has never been questioned for a moment. As one of his friends and admirers, I took it for granted that his name would be dropped. The people seem to think otherwise and are paying him now, in the election of Blaine delegates to Chicago, the most remarkable popular tribute that any citizen has ever had bestowed upon him. Minnesota is naturally a Blaine State. There has been no advocacy of his cause there for the reason I have stated. The feeling expressed for Judge Gresham is somewhat the result of his attendance on soldiers gatherings at Minneapolis, where his pleasant ways made him popular. He has a bullet in his leg, which makes him a hero. There are a number of old Ohioans and Indianans among Minnesota Republicans who are for Sherman or Harrison out of old association sake as well as present admiration for the sterling qualities of these statesmen. Probably as warm a feeling as any is that which is extended by our people generally to Senator Allison, of Iowa. I believe there is one delegate accredited to Gen. Alger from our State, but he is little known there. Of other favorite sons there is little or no talk. After all is said, if Mr. Blaine can be persuaded to make the race again, I think the sentiment in Minnesota would favor him above any one else."

Way Off As Usual.

Mr. John L. Stevens, of Augusta, former editor of the Kennebec Journal, the author of the editorial entitled "Individual and Popular Circles," copied into the columns of THE WHIG, seeks skillfully to avoid the real issue.—Commercial.

The above reference to the editorial in the Portland Express is but one of the almost daily illustrations of the dense ignorance of our contemporary concerning topics it attempts to discuss just as though it knew what it is talking about. The proprietors of the Kennebec Journal will be surprised to learn that Hon. John L. Stevens has severed his connection with their paper, as will the proprietors of the Express to learn that he is writing the editorial opinions of their journal. This statement is, however, about as near the truth as the Commercial usually hits on any subject.

The Tariff Debate.

[Boston Journal.]

If any one has been withheld from following the course of the tariff debate in the House by the feeling that the discussion of such a question must necessarily be dull, he should not allow that notion to restrain him from reading the speech of Mr. Reed, of Maine, the substance of which is printed elsewhere. Such a speech would represent an oasis in a debate far more tedious than this discussion of the tariff. Mr. Reed is an adept in argument, and a master of raillery. He punctures the absurdities of the free traders with a zest which is absolutely captivating. His argument is as simple as it is strong in construction, and his illustrations are shrewd, homely and practical. His wit is not mere buffoonery like that of Sunset Cox, who amused the House with rhymes the other day, but it illumines an argument which is securely and broadly founded.

Mr. Reed has made many brilliant speeches, but none more taking and effective than this. His logic is as convincing as his humor is contagious. He can be eloquent when he chooses, and is so more than once in this speech, but his chief delight is to explore the weak points in his adversary's armor with his keen shafts. This speech is one which should be scattered broadcast by Republican committees. It is certain to be read, and wherever read will prove to be convincing and instructive not less than entertaining.

It was unfortunate that Mr. Carlisle in his speech in reply to Mr. Reed should have been embarrassed by an indisposition which prevented him from appearing at his best. As it was, Mr. Carlisle, unless he has been misreported, did not venture far from the beaten path of tariff discussion, and though his argument was interesting and well presented, it lacked the convincing quality of that of his opponent. It was not to the Democratic side in this debate what Mr. Reed's speech was to the Republican side. Had Mr. Carlisle been in better physical condition he would certainly have made his speech more effective, for no one doubts that the able Kentuckian is one of the most powerful as well as most earnest champions whom the anti-tariff cause possesses.

Morrison's Defeat.

Before the real debate began in the House Saturday the vast audience enjoyed a performance which was wholly unexpected by them. In his speech, Friday, Breckenridge, of Kentucky, declared that that "brave and true man," Morrison, had been defeated by corrupt means used by the agents of protected industries.

Now Morrison's successor, says a Washington despatch, is the venerable and quaint but fiery John Baker, a Kentuckian, who was born near the home of Henry Clay, in the district now represented by Breckenridge. He was on the ground early in the morning with blood in his eye, prepared to resent the charge against himself and his constituents. He is a man of old-fashioned manners and dress, and made a striking appearance as he stood, erect as a grenadier, facing the Democratic side and glaring at the uneasy Kentuckian on the opposite side of the Chamber.

The Democrats were at first disposed to "guy" the old man as he began with deliberate utterance and tremendous emphasis to repel what he denounced as "the outrageous attack" upon his honor and the honor of his district. In part he said:

I hurl back the words and denounce the imputation as grossly untrue. I hurl them back into the face and teeth of the gentleman from Kentucky with direct and unmitigated defiance. To use an expressive and historic expression, no man from the South can come here and crack his black snake whip over my shoulders. If he attempts it he may find the weapon playing upon his own person. If it be a distinction to be a Kentuckian, I, too, am one. I was born within the shadow of Ashland, where lived the great Henry Clay, who represented that district in this House. His seat, alas, is worse than vacant now. He was a man of might; his words uttered here still live. The speeches of his successor are mere garlands of flowers without leaves or fruit—"fit only for my lady's bower."

This extract gives one a fair idea of Mr. Baker's quality, and he had not proceeded far before the Republicans were aroused and the Democrats became silent. Breckinridge grew more and more uneasy, and held whispered conferences with Carlisle and other leaders. Baker called attention to the fact that he represents six times as many ballots as Breckinridge.

"No voice except this one," said he, "has been raised to impugn my title here. No memorial signed by thousands of voters in my district has been presented here protesting that I was not fairly and honestly elected." This allusion to Carlisle's smirched title made the latter's face flush and provoked hearty applause on the Republican side. Baker then went on to show that the defeat of Morrison was a victory for the purity of the ballot over fraud and intimidation.

When Baker sat down Breckinridge arose to reply. Mills was not on hand to object, but many Republicans and some Democrats cried for the regular order. Reed, who was entitled to the floor, yielded it upon Baker's request. Perhaps the latter knew that Breckinridge would hang himself if he got rope enough. At any rate he did so. His speech was apologetic and to say humble, but he essayed to support his charge by causing to be read two letters written by John Jarrett during the campaign to a workingman in Morrison's district. Neither of the letters contained a word or a suggestion than any improper means were to be used to compass Morrison's defeat. In fact they showed that the workingmen depended wholly upon legitimate effort and were barely able to pay the travelling and other necessary expenses of the speakers among the miners and artisans. The reading of the letters brought round after round of applause from the Republicans, who felt that Breckinridge had fashioned an excellent campaign document for their use in the coming contest. Baker's response to the apology of Breckinridge was that the Kentucky mountain had labored and "brought forth a most ridiculous mouse." Probably Colonel Morrison will feel that he also has been made ridiculous by his volunteer champion and eulogist.

Give These Matters a Thought.

"No matter what your ability to provide for your family and make money, is it not common prudence to supplement the value of your estate with such collateral security as Life Insurance?

Property sometimes depreciates in value, and the proceeds of a policy make good the loss to your estate.

The most careful judgment as to investment, is often found to result disastrously, in which case the policy comes to the rescue."

WARREN'S COUGH BALSAM.

THIS IS AN OLD AND RELIABLE REMEDY

For Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Diphtheria, etc.

It was originally prepared by the advice and under the supervision of one of the most skillful physicians of the country. From the very first it took high rank among the specifics for those diseases, and ever since it has been growing in favor with the people and the medical profession, as the large number of testimonials in our possession will show. It is pleasant to take and affords quick relief. We offer it to the public, confident that it has no equal for the purposes for which it is recommended.

Bangor Carpet Store

ESTABLISHED 1851

We are daily making additions to our stock in every department and would call special attention this week to several lots of Draperies which we have to-day placed in our Curtain Department. Among which are 60 pairs Tolentia Mull Curtains, at $7.00 per pair. They are 3½ yards long and 50 inches wide, in three designs and two colorings, and are just the article for seaside cottage use. Twenty pairs in three colors at $4.50 per pair; former price $6.25; 20 pairs Scotch Canvas at $1.75—never have been sold less than $2.50; 15 pair heavy Vienna Portieres, a number of them single pairs at a great reduction from the usual prices.

Madras Pattern Curtains,

We have the Finest Line of CORNICE POLES in Metal and Wood of all kinds to be found in the State.

Irish Point, Swiss, Canvas and Nottingham Curtains

in great variety with Fringes, Loops, etc., to match. We can show you many novelties in this line.

ROOM PAPERS.

Although we have closed out many lots in this department recent arrivals enable us to present as fine assortment as at any time this season. We have all grades from the 15 cent gilt to the Finest Hand Print and Pressed Papers, also Lincrusta-Walton, the most beautiful and durable of all Relief Decorations, Friezes, Mouldings and Ceiling Decorations in great variety. This Department contains more private patterns than we have been unable to control for the past five years.

Brussels, Tapestry and Ingrain Carpets.

Our line of Carpets has never been more satisfactory in style, price and quality than we find it this Spring, as our large sales during the past month will bear evidence. We shall endeavor to keep the assortment fully up to standard during the forthcoming month.

Straw Mattings in all grades from the 12 cent to the Finest grades, including the Fine Short Loop which we have found to be the best low priced floor covering in use.

Smyrna Rugs. We are now showing a complete line of sizes in the best quality, from the smallest Single Door to the largest Carpets, also a new size just put in the market and intended for hall use. An inspection of our stock will convince you that we have the largest variety of standard goods at the lowest prices ever quoted in any market.

AUGUSTA May 23 Chairman S S Brown of the State Committee, took the [illegible] A M and read the call for the [illegible] after which he spoke for some [illegible] upon the duties of the hour and [illegible] work before the convention Mr. Brown then introduced Hon A H Powers of Houlton, as temporary chairman of the convention

On assuming the chair Mr Powers said I am not unmindful of the high honor, dignity and responsibility to which I have been called It is an honor to preside over the representative Democracy of Maine I hope we shall dispatch business satisfactorily to all our people We have come together like old soldiers, shoulder to shoulder, to march on to a glorious victory I trust the action of the convention will meet the approval of the people and that we shall nominate such men as will lead to unite and harmonize the entire party There are no dissensions among our people. The trouble is our leaders are fighting among themselves instead of fighting the common enemy.

Mr. Powers closed by a reference to the administration of President Cleveland and made an appeal for its continuance, saying the electors selected to-day should vote for the re-election of Grover Cleveland. In his election we go in for reform in the civil service, retrenchment in the public expenditures and personal worth and integrity.

Hon W. H Clifford, of Portland, member of the National Democratic Committee, was loudly called for, and ascending the platform thanked the convention for its welcome

Mr Moody moved that the State Committee be the committee on credentials

Afternoon Session

When the convention assembled at 2 30 o'clock it was after a forced adjournment of the Second District Democratic Convention It was with great difficulty that Chairman Powers succeeded in restoring order and getting sense enough into the excited Democracy to enable the convention to proceed to business

The nominations for county vice presidents and members of State Committee and members of the committee on resolutions were presented by the chair and declared elected

Mr Moody moved that a committee of five be appointed by the chair to receive sort and count votes. The motion was seconded and declared carried

Col Osgood said he begged the indulgence of the convention to present a series of resolutions which were sacred in their nature and demanded attention.

The chair here interposed and appointed as the above committee Ara Warren, J L Leveuseller, L L Greenlief, George I Hughes, and Charles McCarthy.

The following delegates at large to St Louis were then elected. First District, Payson Tucker Portland; Second District, Arthur Sewall Bath, Third District, E. C. Allen, Augusta, Fourth District, James Tobin, Bangor.

The Platform

The committee on resolutions reported a series, the first declaring in favor of a reduction of the tariff and a revision of the present tariff laws The second resolution approves the course of the President and Secretary of State for their action in presenting the fishery treaty to the Senate of the United States The third advocates a reform in the administration of the affairs of the State and a reduction of expenses The fourth approves of the administration of President Cleveland

The fifth favors the enactment of a stringent high license law, and is as follows

Resolved, That we view with alarm the growing evil of intemperance in our State, and in the interest of good society and temperance demand the repeal of the prohibitory liquor law and the enactment of a stringent high license law.

The sixth promises hearty support to the interests of the laboring men.

The seventh and last reposes confidence and esteem in Hon William L. Putnam and promises to use their best efforts for his election as Governor

The minority of the committee submitted a report that they concur in all the resolutions of the majority except the fifth, relating to license, and recommended that no resolution be adopted on the subject, or, if any, one which they submitted condemning the Republican party for the manner in which it has dealt with the temperance question

Nearly an hour was spent in the discussion of the temperance plank, nearly all the leaders of thought and influence opposing license simply because this campaign was not the time for such an issue The minority report was finally accepted and the resolutions were then adopted

A McNichol now walked forth upon the platform, while the air was filled with McGillicuddy cries, and presented the name of Hon Thomas L. Putnam for Governor The name was received with tremendous applause and cheer after cheer rent the air, the band playing "Hail to the Chief" Mr Putnam came on the platform and said It would be folly for me not to say I was pleased at the distinguished honor this convention has conferred upon me which honor I accept, not because it is a matter of personal gratification, but because it is the duty of every citizen to assume his share of the public responsibility which all are called upon to perform, and because I am happy to have my name connected with a movement which will result in the re-election of our present noble President, Grover Cleveland I came here in response to your demand to give my abilities great or small as they are, and my heart also to the cause and I have only to say that they are at your service in the future as they have always been in the past

Mr McGillicuddy was loudly called and addressed the convention

Mr Clifford was then called for

The Convention was briefly addressed by Hon W H Clifford and Hon John B Redman

B F Chadbourne of Biddeford presented the following which was adopted Voted that the Democratic State Committee assume their duties from and after the date of this convention and at once take active measures in carrying on the campaign

The following gentlemen were chosen alternates to the delegates at large First District Tristram Goldthwait Jr Biddeford Second District F K O'Brien Thomaston Third District William M Rust Belfast Fourth District Harry Hudson Guilford

Col Clark S Edwards of Bethel and Charles McCarthy, of Portland were chosen as electors at large

The Convention then adjourned

Second District Democrats in Disorder and Confusion

The Second District Democratic Convention was held in this city to-day Judge Frye of Bethel in the chair Charles E Allen, of Dresden was nominated as candidate from the Second District to Congress and J R Montgomery and ex Gov Garcelon were chosen delegates to the St Louis Convention No resolutions were read. Great disorder and confusion prevailed No alternate delegates were elected

A FATAL AFFRAY

Fight Between Locomotive Men and Coal Heavers

PORTLAND, May 22 Last night at 11 o'clock engine 321 of the Grand Trunk came into the yard here and went to coal up Engineer Isaac McLellan and Fireman Loring Bryan were on her Two coal heavers John Stanley and Harry Brisco evidently drunk, proceeded to put the coal on her The engineer told them how to load it and they took offense, and finally they threw part of a bucket full over into the cab and the engineer gave an exclamation of disgust

On this one of the coal heavers struck him and then both pounced on him and pummelled him The fireman interfered and both coal heavers then turned on him and began to pound him The engineer picked up a shovel and struck Stanley over the head He dropped and Brisco still showed fight It was found later that Stanley was badly hurt and unable to live This morning McLellan came to the officer of his own accord and delivered himself up Both McLellan and Bryan are under arrest but it is thought to be only a case of self defense

Later—The Wounded Man Dies

John Stanley, who was struck with a shovel by Isaac McLellan, last night, died late this afternoon McLellan is still held but will probably be discharged, it being clearly a case of self defense

FIFTIETH CONGRESS—First Session

Senate

WASHINGTON May 22 The House bill appropriating $65 000 for a public building at Bar Harbor Me was passed

After transacting some routine business the Senate at 1 10, proceeded to the consideration of executive business

House

The floor was accorded to the Committee on Labor and Mr O Neill, of Missouri, Chairman of that Committee called up the bill to confine the sale of products of convict labor to the State in which they are produced Mr O'Neill endeavored to have the arrangement effected whereby debate on the bill should be limited to two hours but opposition was made and the majority and minority reports were read at length and an hour was thus consumed Mr O'Neill explained that the measure originated in the visit to this city of manufacturers from New York, Brooklyn Jersey City, Philadelphia and other cities who appeared before the Committee and pictured the absolute ruin that stared them in the face from the competition of convict labor

Mr Plumb, of Illinois, opposed the bill on the grounds that it was unconstitutional and interfered with Inter State Commerce He said that the Committee had not properly investigated the subject before acting

AMUSEMENTS

Uncle Tom's Cabin

Next Saturday afternoon and evening Abbey's Double Mammoth Uncle Tom's Cabin Company will be seen at the Opera House With this company are two uniformed brass bands white and colored and the Mystic quartette The Albany Argus has the following notice of the company

Uncle Tom's Cabin was given at the Leland last evening in the presence of a very good sized audience that seemed to enjoy the unfolding of the play as well as if it was the occasion of an original production It does seem rather strange that this time-worn drama should retain such a firm hold on the theatrically inclined public but such is the fact and there is no gainsaying it The production last evening was above the average and was heartily applauded The jubilee singers in particular being singled out for especial marks of approval

The Hall Concert

The Arbucklenian Quartette will play The National a medley introducing Hail Columbia Red White and Blue Star Spangled Banner Marching Through Georgia and several other melodies ending with Yankee Doodle with variations for each instrument at the benefit concert Friday evening at City Hall to Mr R B Hall

The Treasure of Franchard.

By ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

This was too much for Jean-Marie. That a place should so transform the most excellent of men transcended his belief. Paris, he protested, was even an agreeable place of residence. "Nor when I lived in that city did I feel much difference," he pleaded.

"What!" cried the doctor. "Did you not steal when you were there?"

But the boy could never be brought to see that he had done anything wrong when he stole. Nor, indeed, did the doctor think he had; but that gentleman was never very scrupulous when in want of a retort.

"And now," he concluded, "do you begin to understand? My only friends were those who ruined me. Gretz has been my academy, my sanatorium, my heaven of innocent pleasures. If millions are offered me I wave them back. Retro, Sathanas! Evil one begone! Fix your mind on my example; despise riches, avoid the debasing influence of cities. Hygiene—hygiene and mediocrity of fortune—these be your watchwords during life!"

The doctor's system of hygiene strikingly coincided with his tastes; and his picture of a perfect life was a faithful description of the one he was leading at the time. But it is easy to convince a boy, whom you supply with all the facts for the discussion. And besides there was one thing admirable in the philosophy, and that was the enthusiasm of the philosopher. There was never any one more vigorously determined to be pleased; and if he was not a great logician, and so had no right to convince the intellect, he was certainly something of a poet, and had a fascination to seduce the heart. What he could not achieve in his customary humor of a radiant admiration of himself and his circumstances, he sometimes effected in his fits of gloom.

"Boy," he would say, "avoid me to-day. If I were superstitious, I should even beg for an interest in your prayers. I am in the black fit; the evil spirit of King Saul, the hag of the merchant Abudah, the personal devil of the mediæval monk, is with me—is in me," tapping on his breast. "The vices of my nature are now uppermost; innocent pleasures woo me in vain; I long for Paris, for my wallowing in the mire. See," he continued, producing a handful of silver, "I denude myself, I am not to be trusted with the price of a fare. Take it, keep it for me, squander it on deleterious candy, throw it in the deepest river; I will homologate your action. Save me from that part of myself which I disown. If you see me falter, do not hesitate; if necessary, wreck the train! I speak, of course, by a parable. Any extremity were better than for me to reach Paris alive."

Doubtless the doctor enjoyed these little scenes, as a variation in his part; they represented the Byronic element in the somewhat artificial poetry of his existence; but to the boy, though he was dimly aware of their theatricality, they represented more. The doctor made perhaps too little, the boy possibly too much, of the reality and gravity of these temptations.

One day a great light shone for Jean-Marie. "Could not riches be used well?" he asked.

"In theory, yes," replied the doctor. "But it is found in experience that no one does so. All the world imagine they will be exceptional when they grow wealthy; but possession is debasing, new desires spring up; and the silly taste for ostentation eats out the heart of pleasure."

"Then you might be better if you had less," said the boy.

"Certainly not," replied the doctor; but his voice quavered as he spoke.

"Why?" demanded pitiless innocence.

Dr. Desprez saw all the colors of the rainbow in a moment; the stable universe appeared to be about capsizing with him. "Because," said he—affecting deliberation after an obvious pause—"because I have formed my life for my present income. It is not good for men of my years to be violently dissevered from their habits."

That was a sharp brush. The doctor breathed hard, and fell into taciturnity for the afternoon. As for the boy, he was delighted with the resolution of his doubts, even wondered that he had not foreseen the obvious and conclusive answer. His faith in the doctor was a stout piece of goods. Desprez was inclined to be a sheet in the wind's eye after dinner, especially after Rhine wine, his favorite weakness. He would then remark on the warmth of his feeling for Anastasie, and with inflamed cheeks and a loose, flustered smile, debate upon all sorts of topics, and be feebly and indiscreetly witty. But the adopted stable boy would not permit himself to entertain a doubt that savored of ingratitude. It is quite true that a man may be a second father to you, and yet take too much to drink; but the best natures are ever slow to accept such truths.

The doctor thoroughly possessed his heart, but perhaps he exaggerated his influence over his mind. Certainly Jean-Marie adopted some of his master's opinions, but I have yet to learn that he ever surrendered one of his own. Convictions existed in him by divine right; they were virgin, unwrought, the brute metal of decision. He could add others indeed, but he could not put away; neither did he care if they were perfectly agreed among themselves; and his spiritual pleasures had nothing to do with turning them over or justifying them in words. Words were with him a mere accomplishment, like dancing. When he was by himself, his pleasures were almost vegetable. He would slip into the woods toward Acheres and sit in the mouth of a cave among gray birches. His soul stared straight out of his eyes; he did not move or think; sunlight, thin shadows moving in the wind, the edge of firs against the sky, occupied and bound his faculties. He was pure unity, a spirit wholly abstracted. A single mood filled him, to which all the objects of sense contributed, as the colors of the spectrum merge and disappear in white light.

So while the doctor made himself drunk with words, the adopted stable boy bemused himself with silence.

CHAPTER V.

TREASURE TROVE.

The doctor's carriage was a two wheeled gig with a hood, a kind of vehicle in much favor among country doctors. On how many roads has not one seen it, a great way off between the poplars—in how many village streets, tied to a gate post! This sort of chariot is affected, particularly at the trot, by a kind of pitching movement to and fro across the axle, which well entitles it to the style of a Noddy. The hood describes a considerable arc against the landscape, with a solemnly absurd effect on the contemplative pedestrian. To ride in such a carriage cannot be numbered among the things that appertain to glory; but I have no doubt it may be useful in liver complaint. Thence, perhaps, its wide popularity among physicians.

One morning early, Jean-Marie led forth the doctor's noddy, opened the gate and mounted to the driving seat. The doctor followed, arrayed from top to toe in spotless linen, armed with an immense flesh colored umbrella, and girt with a botanical case on a baldric; and the equipage drove off smartly in a breeze of its own provocation. They were bound for Franchard, to collect plants, with an eye to the "Comparative Pharmacopœia."

A little rattling on the open roads, and they came to the borders of the forest and struck into an unfrequented track; the noddy yawed softly over the sand, with an accompaniment of snapping twigs. There was a great, green, softly murmuring cloud of congregated foliage overhead. In the arcades of the forest the air retained the freshness of the night. The athletic bearing of the trees, each carrying its leafy mountain, pleased the mind like so many statues; and the lines of the trunk led the eye admiringly upward to where the extreme leaves sparkled in a patch of azure. Squirrels leaped in mid air. It was a proper spot for a devotee of the goddess Hygeia.

"Have you been to Franchard, Jean-Marie?" inquired the doctor. "I fancy not."

"Never," replied the boy.

"It is a ruin in a gorge," continued Desprez, adopting his expository voice; "the ruin of a hermitage and chapel. History tells us much of Franchard; how the recluse was often slain by robbers; how he lived on a most insufficient diet; how he was expected to pass his days in prayer. A letter is preserved, addressed to one of these solitaires by the superior of his order, full of admirable hygienic advice; bidding him go from his book to praying, and so back again, for variety's sake, and when he was weary of both to stroll about his garden and observe the honey bees. It is to this day my own system. You must often have remarked me leaving the 'Pharmacopœia'—often even in the middle of a phrase—to come forth in the sun and air. I admire the writer of that letter from my heart; he was a man of thought on the most important subjects. But, indeed, had I lived in the Middle Ages (I am heartily glad that I did not) I should have been an eremite myself—if I had not been a professed buffoon, that is. These were the only philosophical lives yet open: laughter or prayer; sneers, we might say, and tears. Until the sun of the Positive arose, the wise man had to make his choice between these two."

"I have been a buffoon, of course," observed Jean-Marie.

"I cannot imagine you to have excelled in your profession," said the doctor, admiring the boy's gravity. "Do you ever laugh?"

"Oh, yes," replied the other. "I laugh often. I am very fond of jokes."

"Singular being!" said Desprez. "But I divagate (I perceive a thousand ways that I grow old). Franchard was at length destroyed in the English wars, the same that levelled Gretz. But—here is the point—the hermits (for there were already more than one) had foreseen the danger and carefully concealed the sacrificial vessels. These vessels were of monstrous value, Jean-Marie—monstrous value—priceless, we may say; exquisitely worked, of exquisite material. And now, mark me, they have never been found. In the reign of Louis Quatorze some fellows were digging hard by the ruins. Suddenly—tock!—the spade hit upon an obstacle. Imagine the men looking one to another; imagine how their hearts bounded, how their color came and went. It was a coffer, and, in Franchard, the place of buried treasure! They tore it open like famished beasts. Alas! it was not the treasure; only some priestly robes, which, at the touch of the eating air, fell upon themselves and instantly wasted into dust. The perspiration of these good fellows turned cold upon them, Jean-Marie. I will pledge my reputation, if there was anything like a cutting wind, one or other had a pneumonia for his trouble."

"I should like to have seen them turning into dust," said Jean-Marie. "Otherwise I should not have cared so greatly."

"You have no imagination," cried the doctor. "Picture to yourself the scene. Dwell on the idea—a great treasure lying in the earth for centuries, the material for a giddy, copious, opulent existence not employed; dresses and exquisite pictures unseen; the swiftest galloping horses not stirring a hoof, arrested by a spell; women with the beautiful faculty of smiles, not smiling; cards, dice, opera singing, orchestras, castles, beautiful parks and gardens, big ships with a tower of sailcloth, all lying unborn in a coffin—and the stupid trees growing overhead in the sunlight, year after year. The thought drives one frantic."

"It is only money," replied Jean-Marie. "It would do harm."

"Oh, come!" cried Desprez, "that is philosophy; it is all very fine, but not to the point just now. And, besides, it is not 'only money,' as you call it; there are works of art in the question; the vessels were carved. You speak like a child. You weary me exceedingly, quoting my words out of all logical connection, like a parroquet."

"And at any rate, we have nothing to do with it," returned the boy submissively.

NUTRITIOUS BAKING POWDERS.

By Prof. Doremus, of Bellevue Medical College, N. Y.

It is a serious problem for the physiological chemist to discover the best method of supplying the human system, especially an exhausted one, with the requisite amount of phosphatic food for the organism to remain in health. The phosphatic salts are never wanting in the most nourishing varieties of food, whether vegetable or animal. They are jealously allied to all the vital functions; are constantly being eliminated from the body, and must be replaced by a fresh supply. The testimony of thousands goes to show that under the prevalent conditions and habits of American life, there are few who are not greatly benefitted when they partake of these same phosphates as restorative agents. The sales of phosphatic preparations for medicinal use, or as a mild tonic, have assumed enormous proportions.

On April 22d, 1856, Prof. E. N. Horsford secured his letters patent for the manufacture and use of an acid phosphate of lime to be incorporated with starch and bicarbonate of soda, and thus serve as a baking powder. This is the first instance in which, besides acting as an aerating agent, a baking powder was to add nutritive elements to the bread. Phosphatic powders are to-day the sole exemplification of this important principle. The natural phosphates removed from the grain in the process of bolting the flour are by Horsford's method restored through the baking powder. While the residues which all baking powders leave, except those which consist of salts which volatilize completely under the heat of the baking oven, are of a nature which makes it a matter of doubt whether they should be introduced into the system, in case of the phosphatic powders the residue is of positive value and is not foreign to the flour, but composed of the same salts, practically, which form the ash of the cereal grains.—Scientific American.

The Old Reliable "Horsford's Bread Preparation" is made by Prof. Horsford's process.

"There are moments when silence prolonged and unbroken
More expressive may be than all words ever spoken."

Look at that wan and wasted woman, once the picture of health, now so pallid! She cannot begin to tell her sufferings, but as from day to day she goes through the house, attending to her many cares, her attenuated form, her white face, her stooping shoulders, her pinched features, all tell that she is a silent martyr to disease. Her once cheery voice is seldom heard, but her silence tells her suffering more than words could do. O! ye silent, sorrowing, suffering sisters, there is a cure for your troubles; Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a sovereign remedy for the derangements and maladies peculiar to your sex. As a powerful, invigorating tonic, it imparts strength to the whole system. For overworked, "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," housekeepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, "Favorite Prescription" is the greatest earthly boon, being unequalled as an appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

AN IMPERATIVE NECESSITY.

What pure air is to an unhealthy locality, what spring cleaning is to the neat housekeeper, so is Hood's Sarsaparilla to everybody, at this season. The body needs to be thoroughly renovated, the blood purified and vitalized, the germs of disease destroyed. Scrofula, Salt Rheum, and all other blood disorders are cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, the most popular and successful spring medicine. Everything which belongs to pure, healthy blood is imparted by Hood's Sarsaparilla. A trial will convince you of its merit. 10

"THAT DIABOLICAL APPARATUS, the stomach," is the energetic phrase which Carlyle applied to his own troublesome organ of digestion. The great essayist was a dyspeptic from his youth; but had he used Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, he might have shaken off the incubus of indigestion, "like a dewdrop from a lion's mane," and there would have been more "sweetness and light" in his writings and home. CURE

Sick Headache and relieve all the troubles incident to a bilious state of the system, such as Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Distress after eating, Pain in the Side, &c. While their most remarkable success has been shown in curing

SICK

Headache, yet Carter's Little Liver Pills are equally valuable in Constipation, curing and preventing this annoying complaint, while they also correct all disorders of the stomach, stimulate the liver and regulate the bowels. Even if they only cured

HEAD

Ache they would be almost priceless to those who suffer from this distressing complaint; but fortunately their goodness does not end here, and those who once try them will find these little pills valuable in so many ways that they will not be willing to do without them. But after all sick head

ACHE

Is the bane of so many lives that here is where we make our great boast. Our pills cure it while others do not.

Carter's Little Liver Pills are very small and very easy to take. One or two pills makes a dose. They are strictly vegetable and do not gripe or purge, but by their gentle action please all who use them. In vials at 25 cents; five for $1. Sold by druggists everywhere, or sent by mail.

WHY HER MAJESTY'S CORSET

is

than any other made in EUROPE or AMERICA,

BECAUSE

1st, IT IS THE ONLY CORSET EVER MADE that will reduce the size and increase the length of the waist of FLESHY LADIES without injurious tight lacing.

2d, IT IS THE BEST SPINAL SUPPORTER ever made, and it supports equally well the abdomen and all other parts of the body.

3d, IT IS PROOF AGAINST PERSPIRATION and moisture. Will neither corrode or soil the underwear, stretch or break at the waist. The bones never move or come out in wear.

4th, IT NEVER CHANGES ITS FORM, always retaining its original shape; it is invaluable to young ladies, because it removes and prevents stooping and round shoulders.

5th, THIS CORSET MUST NOT BE MORE than 2 inches smaller than the size of your waist when measured tightly over your dress. If so ordered no Corset Maker can make one to order (at any price) that will fit as well, or with as much ease and comfort, or give such a magnificent form.

A FRIGHTFUL SKIN DISEASE.

Sufferings Intense. Head nearly raw. Body covered with Sores. Cured by the Cuticura Remedies.

Messrs. Stevens & Bruner, Monroe, N. C.

Dear Sirs,—About two months ago, on your recommendation, I bought a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, one box Cuticura Salve, and one cake of Cuticura Soap, for my son, aged thirteen years, who has been afflicted with eczema for a long time, and I am pleased to say that I believe they [illegible] have cured him. His sufferings were intense, his head being nearly raw, his ears being gone except the gristle, and his body was covered with sores. His condition was frightful to behold. The sores have now all disappeared, his skin is healthy, eyes bright, cheerful in disposition, and is working every day. My neighbors are witnesses to this remarkable cure, and the doubting ones are requested to call or write me, or any of my neighbors.

WM. S. STEPHENSON,
Winchester P. O., Union Co., N. C.

Monroe, N. C., Oct. 29, 1887.

The Potter Drug and Chemical Co.:

Gentlemen,—Mr. Wm. S. Stephenson of this county brought his son to town to-day to let us see him, and to show what Cuticura Remedies had done for him. This is the case referred to in our letter to you some time ago. To look at the boy now, one would suppose that there had never been anything the matter with him,—seems to be in perfect health. We have written and herewith inclose what his father has to say about the matter,—wrote it just as he dictated.

We are selling quite a quantity of Cuticura Remedies, and hear nothing but praise for them. We regard the Cuticura Remedies the best in the market, and shall do all we can to promote their sale.

Yours truly, STEVENS & BRUNER,
Druggists and Pharmacists

CUTICURA, the great skin cure, and CUTICURA SOAP, prepared from it, externally, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new blood purifier, internally, are a positive cure for every form of skin and blood disease, from pimples to scrofula.

Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50 cents; SOAP, 25 cents; RESOLVENT, $1.00. Prepared by the POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CO., Boston.

PIMPLES, black-heads, red, rough, chapped and oily skin prevented by Cuticura Soap.

Sneezing Catarrh.

The distressing sneeze, sneeze, sneeze, the acrid, watery discharges from the eyes and nose, the painful inflammation extending to the throat, the swelling of the mucous lining, causing choking sensations, cough, ringing noises in the head and splitting headaches—how familiar these symptoms are to thousands who suffer periodically from head colds or influenza, and who live in ignorance of the fact that a single application of SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE FOR CATARRH will afford instantaneous relief.

But this treatment in cases of simple catarrh gives but a faint idea of what this remedy will do in the chronic forms, where the breathing is obstructed by choking, putrid mucous accumulations, the hearing affected, smell and taste gone, throat ulcerated and hacking cough gradually fastening itself upon the debilitated system. Then it is that the marvellous curative power of Sanford's Radical Cure manifests itself in instantaneous and grateful relief. Cure begins from the first application. It is rapid, radical, permanent, economical, safe.

To the Honorable Judge of Probate for the County of Penobscot.

The undersigned, Guardian of Alden P. Webster, of Orono in said County, minor heir of Ebenezer Webster, late of Orono, in said County deceased, respectfully represents that said minor is seized and possessed of the following described real estate, viz:

One fifth (1-5) in common and undivided of the lot of land and buildings thereon standing, on the main street leading from Stillwater Bridge to Marsh Point, in said town of Orono, described as follows, viz:

Beginning on said Main Street at the southeast corner of the homestead lot of the late James P. Crowell, thence easterly on said Main street one hundred and seventy-two (172) feet, thence at right angles with said Main street, northerly, ten (10) rods to a stake, thence westerly, parallel with said Main street, one hundred seventy two (172) feet to the easterly line of said Crowell homestead lot, thence on said Crowell line ten (10) rods to said Main street at the point begun at. Subject to a right of way for teams across the easterly side of said lot, and the grantor to maintain all line fences adjoining said lot. Subject to the widow's right of dower therein.

That it would be for the benefit of said minor that said Real Estate should be sold and the proceeds thereof put out at interest or otherwise used for his benefit.

She therefore prays that license may be granted her to sell and convey the above described Real Estate at public or private sale, according to the requirement of Law.

P. S. WEBSTER.
